Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif inaugurated the Khanewal-Multan section of the Multan-Faisalabad motorway on Saturday, Radio Pakistan reported.

Speaking at the inauguration ceremony, the premier said Pakistan has been left behind in terms of development due to a lack of focus by previous governments on energy and construction projects.

“If development work had not come to a halt in the country after 1999, Pakistan’s situation would have been different today,” PM Nawaz said.

“The M-4 project which includes four interchanges, 17 bridges and 28 subways, has been completed at a cost of about Rs13 billion and will contribute towards the economy in terms of surge in employment and business opportunities,” PM Nawaz said while adding that “the motorway will help farmers as their goods will be transported easily, saving time and money.”

Further, the premier, while addressing the media and those in attendance, said that this motorway is a part of Karachi-Lahore motorway, which provides an additional linkage from Multan to other motorways.
